Shewfelt, 2012-04-23

Becoming a Food Scientist is designed as a reservoir of ideas for those beginning a graduate education in food science or beginning a professional career in the field Although at times it may read as a how to manual for success in graduate school it is meant to encourage each reader to study the research process to challenge conventional wisdom and to develop a career path that maximizes the probability of success both in school and beyond The author has viewed food science graduate programs through the lenses of programs at four universities and service in numerous activities with the Institute of Food Technologists This book is thus focused on the field of food science but it may have relevance to other scientific disciplines The book introduces the concept of research as process in the first chapter Subsequent chapters focus on individual unit operations of research idea generation problem definition critical evaluation of the literature method selection experimental design data collection processing and analysis and knowledge dissemination Successful graduate students in food science must master each of these operations The final section of the book pushes the reader beyond graduate school into its practice in the real world Topics covered in the maturation of a food scientist include the scientific meeting critical thinking science and philosophy ethics finding and managing the literature planning grantsmanship laboratory setup and management and career development This book should be a meaningful companion for any graduate student in the field and those transitioning from graduate school to the food science profession The Art of Funding and Implementing Ideas Arnold R. Shore, John M. Carfora, 2010-04-07

Takes the reader to a new level in proposal writing The authors have captured the gestalt of grant writing in a lucid fashion In short I think students would appreciate the clarity and insights this book offers Robert J Hard University of Texas at San Antonio As a research scientist who is frequently involved in proposal development myself it is clear to me that the authors have travelled the grant writer's path before John V Stone Michigan State University This resource provides a step by step approach to turning a research idea into a proposal worthy of funding demystifying the process as a result The authors present a proven approach to the development of research ideas alongside a systematic treatment of proposals section by section and project management function by function Highly accessible this book gives examples for each aspect of the proposal development and works through sketches of ideas to fully developed proposal sections Key Features Contains idea development linked to specific proposal sections Supports creativity that can be captured effectively and systematically one step at a time Uses sketches to facilitate idea development and make enhancement and revisions easy Allows for ease in trying out alternative formulations and revising preliminary approaches Provides international research proposals Key to understanding resources for proposing international research collaborations Shows how to manage a funded project Guides researchers and research staff in effectively implementing a funded project

This book is appropriate for all graduate students across the health social and behavioral sciences who need guidance on writing successful compelling funding proposals

Grants Jean M. Fromm, 2007 Grants are available from thousands of sources both private and public To the grantseeker however this wealth of sources appears like an impenetrable jungle Where are the grants I need and what do I need to do to submit my ideas and proposals This book is designed to answer these questions by aiming the grantseeker to both the grant givers and by providing a bibliography of book for further research

Funding Public Schools Kenneth K. Wong, 1999 This book examines the fundamental role of politics in funding our public schools and fills a conceptual imbalance in the current literature in school finance and educational policy Unlike those who are primarily concerned about cost efficiency Kenneth Wong specifies how resources are allocated for what purposes at different levels of the government In contrast to those who focus on litigation as a way to reduce funding gaps he underscores institutional stalemate and the lack of political will to act as important factors that affect legislative deadlock in school finance reform Wong defines how politics has sustained various types of rules that affect the allocation of resources at the federal state and local level While these rules have been remarkably stable over the past twenty to thirty years they have often worked at cross purposes by fragmenting policy and constraining the education process at schools with the greatest needs Wong s examination is shaped by several questions How do these rules come about What role does politics play in retention of the rules Do the federal state and local governments espouse different policies In what ways do these policies operate at cross purposes How do they affect educational opportunities Do the policies cohere in ways that promote better and more equitable student outcomes Wong concludes that the five types of entrenched rules for resource allocation are rooted in existing governance arrangements and seemingly impervious to partisan shifts interest group pressures and constitutional challenge And because these rules foster policy fragmentation and embody initiatives out of step with the performance based reform agenda of the 1990s the outlook for positive change in public education is uncertain unless fairly radical approaches are employed Wong also analyzes four allocative reform models two based on the assumption that existing political structures are unlikely to change and two that seek to empower actors at the school level The two models for systemwide restructuring aimed at intergovernmental coordination and or integrated governance would seek to clarify responsibilities for public education among federal state and local authorities above all integrating political and educational accountability The other two models identified by Wong shift control from state and district to the school one based on local leadership and the other based on market forces In discussing the guiding principles of the four models Wong takes care to identify both the potential and limitations of each Written with a broad policy audience in mind Wong s book should appeal to professionals interested in the politics of educational reform and to teachers of courses dealing with educational policy and administration and intergovernmental relations
