

The eleven essays brought together in this volume explore the relations between expulsions, diaspora, and exile between Late Antiquity and the seventeenth century. The essays range from the Greek Empire to seventeenth-century Hungary and involve expulsions and migrations of Jews, Muslims and Protestants. The common goal of these essays is to shed light on a rather unclear situation: first, to try to understand the dynamics of expulsions, in particular its social and political causes; second, to examine how expelled communities integrate (or not) into their new host societies, and finally, to make clear how the experiences of expulsions and exile are made into founding myths that establish (or attempt to establish) group identities.
