Gettysburg Robert Wm Douthat, 2018-02-05 Excerpt from Gettysburg A Battle Ode Descriptive of the Grand Charge of the Third Day July 3 1863 The Charge described in the Battle Ode following this Introduction was preceded by a terrific artillery duel of three hundred guns and this duel lasted about two hours About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Descriptive Key to the Painting of the Repulse of Longstreet's Assault at the Battle of Gettysburg, July 3, 1863 (Classic Reprint) John B. Bachelder, 2015-07-09 Excerpt from Descriptive Key to the Painting of the Repulse of Longstreet's Assault at the Battle of Gettysburg July 3 1863 It has been found difficult in the preparation of this work necessarily brief to simply glance at the prominent features of the battle and mention the important points without extending the account beyond the purpose for which it was intended Where so much could be said it was not easy to dismiss with a sentence scenes and episodes in the battle entitled to chapters of explanation while others perhaps equally important could not be mentioned at all Indeed it was not at first contemplated to publish one fourth of the present material but simply a brief description of the painting which it was intended to accompany With this painting the necessity for a detailed explanation seemed greater than with ordinary historical scenes first because the public have not yet become fully familiar with the detailed history of the battle and also because the painting itself is unusually full and having been designed and painted with strict reference to historical correctness the interest in it will be greatly enhanced by having always at hand a full description of its details with proper historical references and authorities particularly as it is accompanied by an outline key About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Picture of the Battle of Gettysburg (Classic Reprint), 2015-07-06 Excerpt from Picture of the Battle of Gettysburg The better to understand the charge and repulse of Pickett's Division which the artist has endeavored to represent in this picture it will be necessary to say a few words regarding the position of the contending armies as well as the formation of the ground over which the battle was fought First then the Second Corps Hancock's occupied that part of the line of battle known as the left

centre on the gradual declining slope of Cemetery Hill until near Little Round Top where the ground becomes quite or nearly level it then rises rather abruptly to the crest of Little Round Top and with a valley intervening culminates in Round Top the extreme left and key point of the position of the Army of the Union The observer is placed at the left of Hay s Division and on the right of Gibbons the central Division of Hancock s Corps The stone wall in the middle and foreground of the picture was occupied in part on the left by a portion of the 71st P V Col Smith A low stone wall nearly perpendicular to the first named extended out some distance towards the Emmettsburg Road to an angle and thence down towards the left just in front of a clump of trees Nearest to the angle or right of this wall was placed the remainder of Colonel Smith s 71st P V together with two guns of Cushing s Battery On the prolongation of this wall was the 69th Pennsylvania Volunteers commanded by Colonel O Kane and reaching to the left of the clump of trees in the centre middle ground of the picture Then came Halls Brigade then Harrows and then Caldwell s Division of the Second Corps Still further to the left toward Round Top was stationed Doubleday s Division of the First Corps in front of which and the line of Batteries was General Stannard s Vermont Brigade their first battle and gloriously did they do their duty General Dana s Brigade of Doubleday s Division in line supporting Batteries and then General Humphrey s Division Third Corps Sickles in rear and in support of McGilvery s Brigade of reserve artillery Further to the left and somewhat further in the rear De Trobriand s Brigade and in advance of the line occupied by the artillery was placed a Brigade of the Sixth Corps Sedgwick s

S. Huidekoper,2015-07-13 Excerpt from A Short Story of the First Day s Fight at Gettysburg On June 28 1863 the Army of the Potomac which had been molded by the skill of Hooker into as fine a fighting machine of its size as the world has ever seen was turned over in Maryland to General Meade Its duty at that juncture was to force Lee with his large and confident army to turn back from Pennsylvania which he had reached through the Shenandoah and the Cumberland Valleys in the round about way he had chosen for his attack upon Philadelphia and then upon Baltimore and Washington Hooker had spread his army out in the shape of a fan when he moved it from Virginia into Maryland but the disposition of the seven corps was such that rapid concentration upon a central point would be possible besides protection from inroads by the enemy It had been Hooker s plan to interrupt Lee s communications by striking with force up the Potomac and for this purpose Slocum had gone to Knoxville Md with his 12th Corps which was to have been reinforced by French and his 12 000 men at Harper s Ferry General Halleck would not however allow this and Hooker was relieved at his own request on June 28th and the 12th

Corps was moved to Taneytown With this attack upon the communications in view the passes of South Mountain had to be guarded and so Major General John F Reynolds of the 1st Corps was given the 1st the 3rd and the 11th Corps and two brigades of Buford s division of cavalry to command which force became known as the Left Wing and Major General Doubleday of the 3rd Division took command of the 1st Corps The Left Wing was moved northward close along the east side of South Mountain while the 2nd 5th and 6th Corps to be joined later by the 12th bore off to the right more in the direction of Harrisburg and Philadelphia When Meade assumed command of the Army of the Potomac he was fortunate in finding Reynolds thus in charge of the troops nearest the enemy and where his great ability would likely be of the utmost assistance at an early moment About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
